Questions You May Want To Ask Your Interviewer

Applicable to any interview

Remember, an interview is a two-way conversation. Below are questions to think about. Some may apply to your situation, some may not.

1. What are some of the big objectives you are trying to accomplish right now? How would this role help you accomplish this?

2. Looking down the road one year, how would you define success in this position?

3. What type of support does this position receive in terms of people, finances, etc?

4. What freedom would I have in determining my own work objectives, deadlines, and methods of measurement?

5. What advancement opportunities are available for the person who is successful in this position, and within what time frame?

6. What significant changes do you foresee in the near future?

7. How is one evaluated in this position?

8. What accounts for success within the department & company?

By thinking about these questions, hopefully you will be able to find openings to ask some of them. Most importantly, relax, go with the flow, and look confident. Asking important, meaningful questions shows you are interested in the job and the company.
